LINCOLN'S

The local fire companies were called out about 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon to fight a fire in the tenement house at No. 20 Schoolhouse lane, a two and a half story wooden building owned by Edward Wyatt. There were six families living in the louse at the time of the fire, which started in the garret in the tenement rented by Mary Bosworth and is supposed to have been caused by a defective chimney. The Excelsior Hose company was delayed about 25 minutes on account of the lack of horses and the firemen fought the fire for a time hampered by both the absence of hose and ladders. At the fire for a time hampered by both the absence of hose and ladders was requisitioned and was the only ladder in use. In spite of these handicaps and the stubborn nature of the fire the men did splendid work and had the blaze under control at 3.50. Damage by fire and water rendered all the tenements uninhabitable for the present and the six families, none of whom were insured, were forced out of doors. The most pitiable case was that of Mrs. James Hackerman and her mother, both nearly totally blind. They were led to the city library, where er, both nearly totally blind. They were led to the city library, where the librarian, Mrs. Belle Riggleman, assisted by J. B. Baldwin made them comfortable and notified the town officials and the United Charities of their plight. Mr. Hackerman, assistant jan-itor at the high school was notified and arrangements for housing them were completed.

The loss to the owner is about three or four hundred dollars, which is covered by a $2,000 insurance, carried by a local firm.

In spite of the sentiment that attaches to this great American festival it is unquestionably the Thanksgiving dinner that has become the feature in the day's observance. The whole menu for the approaching feast has already been planned by the thrifty housewife.

KICKING MARE CASE.

Rood Brothers Claim Christopher J. Gratton of Scotland Deceived Them in Horse Trade.

Superior court was busy all day in this city with the case of Rood brothers of Windham Center against Christopher J. Gratton of Scotland, a suit over a horse trade.

According to the plaintiff's story, Horace B. Rood, who with his brothers wanted another horse for use on the farm, was in communication with the defendant, and after some talk, first at Gratton's house, and later at the home of the Roods, made a trade of a cow and $22,50 in cash for the black mare, the subject of the dispute. The local fire companies were called

The mare was known as the "kicking mare," but this fact was not known to the purchasers, they said, and Grat-ton told them she was sound and all right in every way, and a good horse to work on the farm, except that she sometimes kicked when being harsometimes kicked when being harnessed.

The trade was made, and the afternoon of the same day Horace Rood had trouble with the horse on the Zion hill road, where he was driving her in team with another horse. The black mare ran away and kicked, and behaved so badly that that evening the brothers took her back to Gratton, who refuse to take her, and finantly ordered them off the place. They went, first tying the mare to the wheel of a wagon there.

On the other hand, the defendant claims that the purchasers knew the mare was a kicker, and that he told them so before they bought here. That is really the main point in the case, which occupied all the day, and will be continued after short calendar to-day.

FINDING FOR PLAINTIFF. udge Greene Awards $1,000 Damages to J. J. Oates in Suit Against S. L.

Thursday afternoon Judge Gardiner Greene handed down his decsilon in the case of Joseph J. Oates vs. S. L. Cardinal, the case for damages for assault recently tried before him. It was claimed that Oates, while engaged in an altercation in Cardinal's saloon on Main and Ash streets, was thrown heavily to the floor by the defendant, with the result that his knee-cap was broken. The defense was that Oates was about to throw a glass at another frequenter of the place, which Cardinal took away from him, but that he fell to the floor of his own accord on account of a bad ankle, and his condition at the time.

Judge Greene finds for the plaintiff to recover one thousand dollars damages, and says in his finding that the Denehey of the local normal school taking away of the glass was a rea-sonable precaution, but the violent throwing down of the plaintiff was unnecessary, reckless and wanton.

TO CLOSE SPECULATION ON BERLIN STOCK EXCHANGE Official Quotations Show Strength of Germany's Finances.

"The most interesting quotations are those of the German and Prusian three per cent. loans. These are listed at 70, the sale figure as in July of 1914. This shows absolutely that the quotation of 55 given in London was purely fanciful, as already has been stated by Dr. Karl Helfferich, secretary of the treasury, who in the Reichstag announced that he had attempted to purchase through neutrals, for redemption purposes, as much of these loans as could be obtained at this rate in London. These attempts met with utter failure. itter failure.
